

Do Aerial Lifts require any special training?

These aerial lifts require specialized training in order to operate them. The training is conducted by Occupational Safety and Health Association, OSHA for short. The training program is quite comprehensive, and covers all aspects of machine handling, from operation, safety procedures, inspection of machinery and its maintenance, and also to work out machine load capacities. The industry hires only those personnel who possess a license from OSHA.